

MAKING ONTARIO OPEN FOR BUSINESS

Ontario's Government for the People Cutting Red Tape to Create & Protect Jobs

Bill 47: Making Ontario Open For Business Act

On Tuesday October 23, Ontario's Government for the People introduced Bill 47, the "Making Ontario Open for Business Act", which aims to eliminate many of the workplace reforms including equal pay for equal work, personal emergency leave, public holiday pay formula as well as reduced maximum penalties for contraventions, that were included in the recently legislated Bill 148: Fair Workplaces, Better Jobs Act 2017. The Provincial government's announcement can be read here.

ORHMA has been committed to working with the Provincial government and Ministry of Labour to provide recommendations based on the impact that Bill 148 has had to Ontario's hospitality industry. ORHMA was in attendance for the introduction and debate in the legislature and was also the only hospitality association that was invited to the media scrum with the Minister of Labour on the topic of the Open for Business Act.

ORHMA's advocacy on behalf of the hospitality industry has shown success as we are truly encouraged that the heavy burdens brought forth in Bill 148 are being repealed by the PC government, which will reduce red tape and allow businesses to flourish by cutting operating costs and promoting new jobs.

The Legislation, as it is currently proposed, seeks to repeal many of the amendments to the ESA and LRA that were enacted under Bill 148. The Legislation also proposes changes to Ontario's skilled trades and apprenticeship system, and the Ontario College of Trades.

Highlights of the Proposed Changes

If the Legislation passes in its current form, some of the more significant changes would be as follows:

Proposed Changes to the Employment Standards Act

1. Minimum Wage:

- Keeping the minimum wage at $14 on January 1, 2019.
- Establishing a 33-month pause in minimum wage increases.

2. Scheduling:

- Repealing the following scheduling provisions that were to come into force on January 1, 2019, including:
 - the employee's right to request changes to schedule or work location after they have been employed for at least three months;
 - providing a minimum of three hours' pay for being on-call if the employee is available to work but is not called in to work;
 - the employee's right to refuse requests or demands to work or to be on-call with less than 96 hours' notice; and
 - Three hours' pay in the event of cancellation of a scheduled shift or an on-call shift within 48 hours before the shift was to begin.

3. Three Hour Rule:

- In its press release, the government indicated that it would be modifying the existing three hour rule but not eliminating it. We do not have details yet but expect that employees who regularly work more than three hours a day will be entitled to a three hour minimum if they are called into work.

4. Leaves of Absence:

- Establishing a right for workers to take up to three days for personal illness, two for bereavement and three for family responsibilities. We currently do not have any indication as to whether or not these days will be paid or if they will supplement or replace the existing personal emergency leave entitlements.
- Protecting current paid leave provisions for cases of domestic and sexual violence affecting an employee or an employee's child.
- Repealing the provision that prohibits employers from requiring an employee to provide a medical note from a qualified health practitioner.

5. Vacation:

- Preserving the right of workers to receive three weeks of paid vacation after five years.

6. Public Holiday Pay:

- Repealing the averaging public holiday pay formula prescribed by Bill 148 and returning to the previous prorating public holiday pay formula. The calculation of public holiday pay under Bill 148 was hotly debated and eventually revisited by the then Liberal government.

7. Equal Pay for Equal Work:

- Repealing equal pay for equal work on the basis of employment status and temporary help agency status. The requirement to provide equal pay for equal work on the basis of sex would remain in place.

8. Penalties:

- Decreasing the maximum penalties from $350/$700/$1500 to $250/$500/$1000.

Proposed Changes to the Labour Relations Act

1. Card-based Certification:

- Repeal card-based certification for workers in home care, building services, and temporary help agencies.

2. Employee Lists:

- Remove the requirement that employers provide employees' personal information to unions.

3. Remedial Certification:

- Reinstate the pre-Bill 148 conditions for the Ontario Labour Relations Board (the OLRB) to certify a union as remedy for employer misconduct, making it more difficult for unions to obtain automatic certification following alleged unfair labour practices.

4. Determining Appropriate Bargaining Units:

- Remove the power of the OLRB to review and consolidate newly certified bargaining units with existing bargaining units. However, the OLRB would retain the discretion to review the structure of bargaining units where the existing bargaining units are no longer appropriate for collective bargaining.

5. Return-to-Work Rights:

- Reinstigate the six month limitation on an employee's right to reinstatement following the start of a strike or lock-out.

6. First Collective Agreement Mediation and Mediation-Arbitration:

- Repeal the special provisions and supports that Bill 148 introduced for first collective agreements, including mediation, mediation/arbitration, educational services and easier access to first agreement arbitration.

7. Misclassification:

- Repealing the reverse onus requirement for the employer to prove that an individual is not an employee where there is a dispute over whether or not the individual has been misclassified.

8. Equal Pay for Equal Work:

- Repealing equal pay for equal work on the basis of employment status and temporary help agency status. The requirement to provide equal pay for equal work on the basis of sex would remain in place.

9. Fines:

- Decrease the fines from $5,000 to $2,000 for individuals and from $100,000 to $25,000 for organizations.

Employers Updating Policies: Ontario employers are faced with the prospect of revising and updating their policies. If passed, the Legislation will require Ontario employers to go back and revisit the recent policy amendments to determine which ones are still relevant to the new regime.

Employers who have already implemented certain benefits and entitlements may find it difficult to roll them back based only on the changes to the legislation, particularly if they have been captured in employment agreements and collective agreements.

Proposed Legislation Timing: Although the legislation Bill 47: Making Ontario Open for Business Act still needs to make its way through the legislative process before it is proclaimed into law, we recommend that employers begin turning their minds to how these proposed changes may impact their business. The Provincial government anticipates passage of this legislation before the end of the legislative session in December. Further details will be provided as they become available.
